Deputies Fire On Man in Hunt For Ray Olson

Suspect Flees Into Woods to Escape Gunfire

PRESS SEARCH

Minneapolis Business Man Says He Was Halted by Killer

Hayward — (AP) — Sheriff's deputies fired today upon a man they believed to be Ray Olson, fugitive killer of two officers, as he tried to slip away at dawn from the knot of armed woodsmen closing in upon him.

Phil Hall, proprietor of a resort 25 miles east of Hayward, said Under Sheriff Jim Girard of Sawyer county and three deputies sighted the suspect as he attempted to make his way across a bridge and a new refuge from the men determined to take him dead or alive.

The squad blazed away with rifles but the man, in his mad dash to the woods, did not stop to return the fire. Hall said the fugitive had not been wounded so far as he knew.

Hunt for Trail
Bloodhounds were rushed to the scene and driven into the woods in hopes of picking up the scent of Olson which they lost several days ago after rain and muddy weather.

Hall said the original squad of possmen near his resort was increased to 100 and they began a systematic attempt to encircle the area into which the man fled.

Deputies Carl Johnson and Fred Scott were shot to death by Olson last Saturday when they, Sheriff George Schuetter, and two other officers stormed the cabin of Indian John Blue Sky to pick up the 30-year-old former convict on a charge of automobile theft.

The fugitive was reported in several parts of the vast, rough lake and wood area since. He raided a Moose Lake general store for groceries and tobacco Monday and yesterday the hunters found what they believed were traces of an Olson hideout in a hunting shack recently.

HALTED BY GUNMAN
Minneapolis — (AP) — A story of being halted by a rifleman he later identified as Ray Olson, Wisconsin fugitive being hunted for a double killing, and driving him 12 miles to town, was related by M. H. Malone, 61, Minneapolis business man.

Malone, owner of a chemical company, was enroute from Park Falls, Wis., to Ladysmith, Wis., Wednesday, he said, and had been stopped three times by deputies hunting for Olson. So he thought nothing of it when, 10 miles on from the last stop, he saw a shabbily-dressed, unshaven man blocking his path with a rifle.

"Deputy?" asked Malone pleasantly as he drew to a stop.

"No," the man replied as he climbed into the car. They drove on.

"Do you have any idea who I am?" the man once asked.

"I might have," replied Malone.

Iid from Workmen
Some workmen appeared ahead and the man ducked from sight. Malone was sure of his passenger then.

They rode on for 12 miles, the man not speaking again until Malone asked:

"How do you want to drive, fast or slow?"

"I don't care," the man replied. Traveling about 60 miles an hour, Malone said the man suddenly began to talk. He told of a robbery, an arrest and then the shooting of two deputies. He said he planned to surrender but "they surrounded the cabin and started shooting at me."

"They'll never take me alive," he declared grimly.

In the distance they saw Ladysmith. Well, I think I'll let you here," the man said and as he got out he asked for money. Malone gave him 72 cents. "I had some more money but he didn't search me," said Malone.

Bursts Bag, Exposes Impostor
James Horne, a man who had been soliciting alms under the pretence that he could neither hear nor speak, was sentenced in Boston Municipal Court to two months. His ruse was discovered when the court doctor, Edward Sandoz, suddenly broke an air-filled paper bag behind Horne. He jumped. Clipper Lands at Horta on Return Trip From Europe

Another Ship Flying Northern Great Circle Route Over Ocean

Shediac, New Brunswick — (Canadian Press) — The Yankee Clipper, enroute to Europe, inaugurating regular trans-Atlantic mail service by the northern great circle route, arrived here at 12:58 p. m. C.S.T. today.

Port Washington, N. Y. — (AP) — Pan American Airways reported today its Atlantic Clipper, homeward bound from a European "preview" flight, landed at Horta, the Azores, at 11:34 a. m. (C. S. T.) After a short refueling stop, the 40-ton flying boat was scheduled to continue to Port Washington.

New York — (AP) — The Yankee Clipper, thundered away from Pan American Airways' Long Island base today on the first "preview" flight along the northern great circle route to Europe. Thirty-three persons, including 21 government and airline officials, were aboard.

The big, four-motored seaplane took off from Port Washington at 7:27 a. m. (C. S. T.) and headed up the New England coast. Captain Harold E. Gray, commander, planned brief stops at Shediac, New Brunswick, and Botwood, Newfoundland, before setting his course for Foyles, Ireland. He was due at Southampton tomorrow afternoon.

The 40-ton ship was scheduled to follow the North Atlantic trail blazed 12 years ago by Charles E. Lindbergh on his solo flight to Paris.

The Yankee Clipper's departure came one week after the start of the first "preview" flight by its sister ship, the Atlantic Clipper, which followed the southern route. Newspaper and radio observers were carried on that flight, preliminary to the beginning of regular trans-Atlantic passenger service next Wednesday.

Two employees of the airline, including Clarence H. Schildbauer, Atlantic division operations manager, were due to leave the Yankee Clipper at Botwood.

U. S. Helps France Raise Submarine

Navy to Send Rescue and Salvage Vessel to Scene of Disaster

Washington — (AP) — The United States navy will help the French raise the sunken submarine Phenix and its tragic cargo of 71 dead.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, Atlantic fleet commander, notified the navy department today that at the request of the French navy ministry the rescue and salvage vessel Pigeon would be dispatched from Manila to French Indo-China waters where the Phenix failed to rise from a dive on June 15.

The French ministry announced yesterday the vessel had been located near Cam-Ranh bay, north-east of Saigon. It was about 165 meters (540 feet) below the surface.

The Pigeon, commanded by Lieutenant W. B. Sampson, is the same type of vessel as the Falcon, employed in the rescue of 33 men from the American submarine Squalus, off Portsmouth, N. H., and in the current attempts at salvage.

Two Children Suffocate In Ice Box in Iowa Home

Des Moines, Iowa — (AP) — Two small children suffocated yesterday in an old-fashioned ice box at their home here.

Their mother, Mrs. Thelma Roberts, 30, found their bodies when she came home from work on a WPA project. The children were James Roberts, 9, and his sister, Lavina, 6.

Police advanced the theory the children had removed food and were suffocated from the refrigerator and climbed in. There was no ice in the box, they said. Neither door could be opened from the inside.

Promise Vote Next Week on Silver Plan

Western Senate Bloc Agrees to Ballot on Amendment Monday

SPEECHES ENDED

Amendment Would Require Payment of $1.27 Per Ounce in U. S.

Washington — (AP) — Western senators agreed today to end their lengthy speechmaking on the administration monetary bill by voting Monday on a silver price-fixing amendment.

Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) obtained the agreement for a vote on the amendment sponsored by Senator Pittman (D-Nev.), after the senate had to send its sergeant-at-arms out to round up enough members to conduct business at the unusual Saturday session.

The amendment would require the secretary of the treasury to pay $1.27 an ounce for domestic silver, compared with the present price of 64.64 cents under the silver purchase program, continuation of which beyond the June 30 expiration date is provided in the monetary bill.

The agreement to vote was obtained after Majority Leader Barkley reprimanded the senate for the half-hour delay in obtaining a quorum of 59 senators.

Fight Threatens Delay
The fight over monetary legislation—which extends for two years the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and presidential powers for further gold devaluation—has threatened to hold up other important legislation that the administration wants passed before July 1, including the $1,700,000,000 relief bill.

The agreement came after assurances from Barkley that the treasury would continue its price of 64.64 cents an ounce failed to placate the westerners.

They had indicated they would continue prolonged speech-making on the senate floor, which administration leaders say is a filibuster designed to delay new monetary legislation until their demands concerning silver are granted.

Both factions kept an eye on the calendar. Next Friday midnight the government's fiscal year ends and a number of bills, including the monetary and relief measures, must be enacted before then or important administration powers will end.

Plunge to Death Held Deliberate

French Detectives Say Fall From Eiffel Tower Couldn't be Accident

Paris — (AP) — Detectives said today that the 188-foot death plunge of a Czechoslovak official during a birthday party last night for the duke of Windsor high in the Eiffel tower must have been deliberate.

They said he could not have fallen without climbing over several large iron girders surrounding a platform where the duke's forty-fifth birthday and the tower's fiftieth anniversary were being celebrated simultaneously.

The Czechoslovak was identified by the Czechoslovak legation as Colonel Bedrich Benes, its former military attaché. Officials said Benes, 42, was no relation of former Czechoslovak president Eduard Benes, now residing in the United States and had resigned his post three months ago.

Colonel Vatslav Kalina, president military attaché of the legation which has remained independent and despite the dissolution of Czechoslovakia, said Benes long had been dependent over the fate of his country.

"His tragedy," Kalina said, "must be part of the greater tragedy of Czechoslovakia."

Benes, who leaves a widow, was not a guest at the formal dinner for the duke in the restaurant on the first platform of the Eiffel tower.

A woman companion said she had been taking pictures of the dinner through a window. In the gravel courtyard below police found a camera still strapped to his wrist.

Britain Cannot 'Submit to Dictation' on Foreign Policy, Chamberlain Says in Address

Cardiff, Wales — (AP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain today characterized Japanese actions in Tientsin as "high-handed and intolerably insulting" in a speech advising the "no British government could submit to dictation from another power as to its foreign policy."

The prime minister made a brief reference to the international situation in an address at an open air conservative party rally in Cardiff which attracted thousands of his political supporters to hear an exposition of domestic policy.

Chamberlain again, as he has done in the house of commons, expressed hope for a local adjustment of the trouble in Tientsin where the Japanese were blockading the British and French concessions for the eleventh day.

"A local dispute between ourselves and the Japanese over the alleged complexity of certain Chi-

Relief Employee Shot To Death; Pittsburgh Steelworker Is Held

Pittsburgh — (AP) — A 32-year-old relief worker was shot to death today in the east end home of a steelworker, who unexpectedly stayed home from work, Police Inspector Frank Ferris reported.

The victim, Jimmie Crawford, staggered from the home with bullet wounds in his heart and hand and died as neighbors rushed him to a hospital.

Ferris said he found the steelworker, William Boyd, 38, awaiting police. The officer quoted Boyd: "I warned that man to stay away from my home. He broke up my home. I fired three times."

Ferris said he learned from the family that Boyd found a letter in Mrs. Boyd's purse and had refused to give it back to her. Later, Boyd called the steel mill and said he would not be at work.

Boyd and his wife were taken to the police station and held for further questioning. Ferris said Mrs. Boyd denied that she had been unfriendly to Crawford and said Crawford came to the house to get tools.

Ferris said the letter was addressed to "Dear Jim."

Dykstra Flirting With $12,000 Job As SSB Chairman

Wisconsin University President Expected in Washington Today

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau

Washington — Expected arrival here today of President C. C. Dykstra of the University of Wisconsin revived rumors that he will be appointed head of the new federal security agency, a $12,000-a-year job with no promise of security when and if this administration ends on Jan. 20, 1941.

Meanwhile, Arthur J. Altmeyer of DePerre and Madison, chairman of the social security board, made it clear that he does not want the job of the "reorganized agency," preferring to keep his $10,000-a-year job for another six years. It is considered certain that the president will reappoint him in August, when his present term expires.

The new federal security agency, which becomes effective July 1, includes the social security board, the national youth administration, the office of education, the civilian conservation corps, the employment service and the United States public health service. These are now scattered in three regular government departments and three independent agencies.

Present Setup
The SSB and the CCC are independent agencies and the NYA is under WPA. Public health is under the health department.

Japs Continue Tightening Up Their Blockade

Declare 'Temporary Martial Law' in Own Concessions at Tientsin

HAMPER TRAFFIC

Food Shortage Is Becoming Apparent for First Time in French Area

Tientsin — (AP) — Tension between Japanese and British communities in Tientsin mounted today with a general tightening of the restrictions by which Japanese have isolated the British and French concessions.

Japanese officers declared "temporary martial law" in the Japanese concession, adjoining the French concession, and cleared Asahi road, its main artery, of all traffic. The move apparently was made because of the arrival of some high Japanese official.

Earlier Japanese gendarmes had forced traffic in the area just outside the concessions to a virtual standstill after reportedly discovering an attempt to smuggle in food.

The food scarcity continued. It became noticeable in the French area for the first time since Japanese imposed their blockade June 14, when British authorities refused to hand over four alleged Chinese terrorists.

The French placed police guards about markets to prevent disorder among crowds of Chinese seeking food and to keep individuals from buying more than the limited amounts allowed by newly-imposed regulations.

During the morning no British subjects attempted to pass the barricades, where unending lines of British troops have brought repeated protests to Japanese.

A new protest was made late yesterday on the forcible unloading of Cecil Davis, an honorary agent for the New Zealand government and the ninth Briton reported subjected to indignities in two days.

French have been better supplied with food than the British, and when shortage occurs, French military trucks have been able to visit the Italian concession and obtain provisions. French police, aided by the garrison of 1,600 French troops here, have guarded their side of the barriers carefully to keep out undesirables.

Medberry Trial Ready for Jury

Judge Outlines Six Possible Verdicts; Final Arguments Begun

Akron, Colo. — (AP) — Over defense objections, District Judge Arlington Taylor today instructed a jury it could recommend the death penalty if it found Ellsworth E. Medberry guilty of first degree murder for the slaying of John T. Gray.

Judge Taylor outlined six possible verdicts in his instructions before attorneys started final arguments.

Medberry, 22-year-old Fond du Lac, Wis., hitch-hiker cheerfully declared he expected to be free to eat a chicken dinner with his parents and wife tomorrow.

The prosecution contended Medberry tortured, robbed and shot Gray after the salesman gave him a ride in his automobile.

The verdicts outlined by Judge Taylor were:

First degree murder with the death penalty; first degree murder with life imprisonment; second degree murder, voluntary manslaughter, involuntary manslaughter and acquittal.

Judge Taylor denied a defense request for an instruction to exclude all state testimony presenting robbery as a motive.

The court advised the jurors to bring in a verdict of acquittal if they found the shooting had been accidental.

Judge Taylor instructed that to reduce the crime below murder, the jurors must find "a serious and highly provoking injury was inflicted on the person killed."

Proposed Loans To Other Nations Face Opposition

Barkley Expects Approval For Most of Spending Program

Washington — (AP) — Critics of President Roosevelt's new $3,800,000,000 lending program centered their opposition today on a provision calling for $500,000,000 in loans to foreign countries.

While several predicted the entire program might encounter hard sledding in congress, a good many more expressed opinion the foreign loans would be rejected.

On the other hand Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, had this to say after a White House conference late yesterday at which congressional Democratic chiefs agreed to seek immediate action:

"Most of the program and probably all of it will go through without much difficulty. Some of it will cause debate, but the general feeling is the whole thing will receive the approval of congress."

Loans To Latin America?
As to the proposed loans to foreign countries, it was assumed they would go largely to Latin American nations because the Johnson act forbidding advances to war debt defaulters bars credit to most European powers.

Michigan Police Trying to Solve Mystery Slaying

Business Associates of Dead Man are Questioned in Murder

Lansing, Mich. — (AP) — Secrecy surrounded the next move of state police detectives trying today to solve the mysterious killing of a middle-aged Detroit oil promoter, allegedly by a hitchhiker.

If the officers obtained any useful information from several persons they questioned and then released last night, there was no indication of it.

Most of those interrogated were business associates of the dead man, George G. Hall, 50, or friends of his woman companion on the fatal automobile ride, Miss Ruby Doty, 32, of Pinconning.

Miss Doty also was questioned and then left for her home. She repeated the details of the ride and shooting after leading officers on an all-day search which finally ended with the finding of Hall's body behind a syringa bush 30 feet from a road three miles south of Laingsburg.

No Arrests Made
"We have nothing to hold anyone on," announced Captain Ira H. Marmon, chief of detectives. He said those who had been questioned promised to return to state police headquarters if they were wanted.

Marmon said he found no discrepancy as Miss Doty repeated her story of picking up a hitchhiker about 30 years old and with a scar

'Insurgent' Group Threatens to Have Own Convention

President of Ousted Club Hints Confab of Old Age Pension Bloc

Indianapolis.—(P)—The national convention of Townsend old-age pension clubs was thrown into an uproar today by mention of the speaker's platform of a threatened revolt against the leadership of Dr. Francis E. Townsend and his followers.

The reference was to Harvey J. Smith of Covington, Ky., who has said he would lead a revolt against the organization's national officers. Smith was not present.

The demonstration came after John Weir of Los Angeles, Calif., convention chairman, asked the delegates their reaction to Smith's announced plans.

Indianapolis.—(P)—Threats of an "insurgent" convention, "possibly within a month," stirred the heated delegates to the fourth national Townsend clubs convention today as they faced another full schedule of oratory and a banquet tonight for which more than two miles of tables were lined up at the state fairgrounds.

Hints that a second national meeting may be called came from Harvey Smith, president of the Covington (Ky.) club, whose charter was suspended.

(Baxter G. Rankine, convention manager, said the Covington club was suspended because of "protests of its own members over local administration of its activities.")

(A suit asking $12,500 damages and a restraining order to prevent barring of Townsend delegates, was filed by Smith in circuit court here. Dr. Townsend and other leaders were summoned for an answer Sept. 5. No attempt was made to seat the Covington delegates and John H. Weir of Los Angeles, convention chairman, announced Thursday another club of "loyal Townsends" had been organized in Covington.)

Baps "One-Man" Control
Smith said he represents "about 1,000 clubs which are dissatisfied with the way the movement is being run."

"We don't think the movement should be run by one man," Smith said. "Dr. Townsend, the movement's founder, is now in control of the organization. We believe the movement should be headed by a 48-member executive committee, one member from each state."

"We don't think we are getting a square deal and we feel that Townsend isn't getting anywhere."

Smith said it had not been determined where the insurgent convention would be held.

Dr. Townsend, in a counter-interview, said he understood "a number of revolts against my organization are under way," but added "I'm not worried."

The elderly pension leader said, "The politicians probably will be siding revolts against my organization" by the next general election.

Issues Warning
Townsend told the delegates Thursday he was willing to "step down" if he wanted a new leader, but the delegates stood up and shouted "No."

He warned that charters of any Townsend clubs joining a revolt would be suspended.

The cheering delegates dug deep in their pockets and showered dollars on Dr. Townsend yesterday after his plan to raise a $100,000 fund for a three-week series of nationwide radio broadcasts was approved.

Singing "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah" to the accompaniment of a booming organ, the audience heaped a large wooden wastebasket high with $500 in silver and bills, including one of $100.

A show of hands approved Dr. Townsend's proposal that he appoint a committee of seven to study possible reorganization of the movement's internal governing structure and report Jan. 1, 1940.

Swim School Students Eager For Final 'Exams' Next Week

Students at the Appleton Post-Crescent-Y. M. C. A. "Learn To Swim School" grew more excited today as the time for their demonstrations before "ma and pa" and before friends and relatives drew near.

The girls will take their final "exams" in the "Y" pool Wednesday night and the boys Thursday evening. The balcony of the pool will be jammed with interested spectators; and the water in the pool will be thrashed with youthful arms and legs as the youngsters show what they've learned at the classes that started June 5.

Ray Risch, school director, has called this year's flock of student swimmers the most eager and adept ever to enroll in the school. Already a great many have passed tests, well ahead of schedule.

Final classes in the school will be held Monday and Tuesday. Classes scheduled Monday and Tuesday will convene Monday; those that have met Tuesday and Friday will meet Tuesday.

About 1,000 youngsters from Appleton and vicinity—the largest enrollment in the swimming school history—have been taking lessons for three weeks.

Four instructors were in charge of classes, two of them for girls and two for boys.

Supervisors are Cooperating in Citizenship Day

Submitting Names of Young People to Act On Head Committee

Appleton's or Outagamie county's Citizenship day is still in the formative stage, but the list of young people who will plan and develop the event is growing every day.

Circuit Judge Edgar V. Werner, who heads the executive committee, said today that supervisors are steadily turning in the names of young people they believe would make good members of a general committee from the county.

The third letter urging supervisors to cooperate on the proposal and submit their choices went out this week. Judge Werner expects that a complete list will be ready soon.

Each supervisor was asked to turn in the names of one young man and one young woman from his ward, town, or village. When all supervisors have made their selection, a general meeting of the young people will be called and definite plans for Citizenship day made.

Supervisors have been asked to confer with the young people before naming them to the Citizenship organization. It has been emphasized that those selected should be interested in the cause and willing to work.

It also is planned, according to Judge Werner, to hold a series of educational meetings attended by young people of the county who have recently reached voting age. The classes will give instruction in voting and other phases of citizenship.

Senate Votes to Debate Reservoir Plan on Wednesday

Green Bay Senator Says He Wants More Time To Study Project

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison.—The Wisconsin state senate will express itself next Wednesday morning on the projected Wolf River reservoir which the Wolf River Reservoir company maintains will increase the power resources of the Fox River and help Fox River Valley industrialists who now find the river level too low in summer for adequate water power operations.

Over the objections of Senator Mike Kresky of Green Bay, the senate yesterday voted to make the bill authorizing the company to build the reservoirs a special order of business next Wednesday.

That action will give the bill precedence over hundreds of others which have clogged the senate calendar and caused a delay in proceedings during the last few weeks.

Kresky objected to immediate consideration of the bill yesterday, which was asked by Senator Mike Mack of Shiocton, because he said he wanted to "get more information on this project and satisfy myself of its worth."

He also wanted to consult with Green Bay officials and businessmen on the proposition, he told the senate.

He also wanted to consult with Green Bay officials and businessmen on the proposition, he told the senate.

Motion to make the measure a special order next week was made by Senator Taylor G. Brown of Oshkosh, a Republican who has expressed interest in the reservoir plan because of its flood control features.

Meanwhile Harry Brooks, secretary of the reservoir company, said in Madison yesterday that Fox River Valley industrialists who are active in the promotion of the development are anxious to begin construction of the Langlade county reservoir site this fall, preferably as early as September, so that the plan could be in operation.

The president left for Hyde Park Friday night, and advices from Madison simultaneously indicated that Dykstra was on his way to Washington. Whether Dykstra was to continue to Hyde Park to talk with the president could not be learned.

Tomorrow Will be Last Day To Fish for Dad, Son Prize

Sunday will be the last day boys under 17 will have a chance to catch a fish to enter in the Appleton Post-Crescent's Dad and Son Fishing Week contest.

And so today probably is the last day for you, if you're a boy under 17, to get next to dad and see if he will take you along on that fishing trip tomorrow.

A trip to some lake or river where the big ones are plentiful wouldn't be so bad, would it? Especially if you caught a fish big enough to take first place in the Post-Crescent's contest.

It's easy enough, providing you got the fish. All you have to do is fill out the blank on this page carefully and file it at the Post-Crescent office sometime before July 1 and the fish will be considered for the prize.

Boys under 17 years of age are eligible if they caught the fish either while they were fishing with their dads any time this week at including Sunday, June 25.

The prize being offered will really make fishing a pleasure for some boys in the future. It is a real anti-backlash reel and a pure sport line. The reel will be given by the Appleton chapter of the Izaak Walton league.

Remember there are no restrictions on where the fish is caught, what kind of fish it is, so long as it was hooked by a boy fishing with his dad or guardian this week. The fish must be signed by an adult not related to the fisherman. The Post-Crescent reserves the right to check into each entry and to require an affidavit if this seems desirable.

APPLETON POST-CRESCENT Dad and Son Fishing Week

I wish to enter my fish in the Appleton Post-Crescent's Dad and Son Fishing Week contest.

I caught a _____ weighing _____ pounds at _____ on _____ while fishing with my _____ father (or guardian).

Name _____ Address _____ Age _____

This is to certify that to my personal knowledge _____ caught the above described fish at the place designated on _____ while fishing with his father or (guardian).

Signed _____

This certificate must be signed by an adult not related to the contestant if the fish is to be considered for a prize. The Post-Crescent reserves the right to check into each entry and to require an affidavit if this seems to be desirable.

Educators Called Inheritors of a Fine Tradition

Denver.—(P)—Education is progressive and educators are not so much innovators or discoverers but inheritors of a fine tradition, Dr. Mary Ellen Chase of Smith college, Northampton, Mass., said last night.

Addressing the final session of the American Association of University Women's convention, Dr. Chase outlined the tradition of taste and excellence in American education from days of the Puritans in Massachusetts bay.

She recounted how early Harvard was supported.

"The fees of one student were paid in a cow and four bushels of barley, another paid a pig for his food and waited tables for his tuition. Every family in New England gave a farthing, in money or in produce, to its support."

Judge Henry Lockney Holds First Session

Waukesha.—(P)—Now that he's a circuit judge, Henry Lockney doesn't want to be any different than he's always been.

Elevated to the bench by Governor Julius Heil after practicing law 44 years, Judge Lockney presided over his first brief session of court yesterday.

He told his friends and fellow attorneys, in a voiced choked with emotion, that:

"I'm the same Henry Lockney I was last week and that I have been for years, with the many faults I've always had."

"I hope I shall retain sense enough always to appreciate and welcome that kind of useful help that can only come from criticism arising from a friendly heart . . ."

Spending Plans in Practice Depend on Men Running Them

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington — In theory the new seven-year $3,860,000,000 self-liquidating loan program just proposed to congress by President Roosevelt is by far the soundest, in a fiscal sense, of any of the re-employment experiments offered by this administration.

It will be denounced as another "spending program." But if examined, it proves to be on paper—a proposal for using government machinery as a trustee agency for investment of private funds in the construction of waterworks, sewage disposal plants, bridges, hospitals, high-speed toll roads and city by-passes, railroad equipment to be leased to carriers, rural electrification projects, and such enterprises. Some of these enterprises would pay for themselves by fees and charges as with waterworks and toll roads. Some would be paid for by local taxation as in the case of sewage disposal plants.

Past PWA projects of a non-federal character have been financed through the federal government making an outright gift of 45 per cent, the remaining 55 per cent being financed on the receiving end, either by borrowing from the government or through bond issues. In the new program, the 45 per cent government gift is eliminated and the whole affair becomes a straight loan proposition.

Loans would be made, not by the federal treasury proper but by various agencies similar to the R.F.C., raising money in the market by selling notes and recovering the advances from the projects over varying periods of years, as Boulder Dam is being paid for. These operations would go on outside of the regular budget, the various government agencies operating somewhat as agents for the investing public. Overhead administrative cost would come out of interest charges on the money.

There is nothing novel about the proposal. It is in line with the recent testimony of numerous economists before the O'Mahoney TNEC, who said that a large field of useful public improvements should be worked to stimulate the heavy industries, but it avoids some of the more adventurous devices suggested, such as the Berle capital credit bank. It adheres to the orthodox financing method, even eliminating the gift element.

Public Works Lack Continuous Returns
The theory meets one real objection, namely that much public work expenditure lacks the continuing dynamic force of private enterprise expenditure. If you spend $1,000,000 on a bridge, you do, during the construction, stimulate employment and industrial production, but after the bridge is built, that is the end. It provides convenience to the public but it no longer gives work or contributes toward industrial production. But if you put $1,000,000 into a factory, you not only have the employment and industrial stimulation afforded by the construction of the project but, when the job is done, then the factory employs men, uses materials, provides freight traffic for the railroads and becomes a continuing multiplier of economic activity. In this sense, the greatest need now is not continuation of public works activity but private activity which will exert continuing effect upon employment and production. Not all public works lack this dynamic force but a considerable portion of them do. That, rather than the "spending" bogey, is the point at which the Roosevelt program falls short.

Mercury Shoots To Highest Mark Of Year in City

Registers 91 Degrees; Showers and Cooler Weather Predicted

Temperatures in Appleton and vicinity soared to the highest point of the season at noon today. The thermometer atop the Post-Crescent building registered 91 degrees.

Clear skies and bright sunshine this noon belied the weatherman's prediction of mostly cloudy for Wisconsin, and local showers for the extreme eastern portion late tonight and Sunday. Cooler weather for tonight and tomorrow also is forecast.

Shoppers and business men peeled their coats this morning and women again appeared on the streets in light frocks after several weeks of either wearing or carrying topcoats. The weather again became an excellent topic for conversation with the usual, "It's sure a hot one," or "Well, summer finally arrived," by way of greeting.

Some thermometers in the city registered as high as 87 degrees at 8 o'clock this morning giving fair warning of what was in store for the population by this afternoon. The highest temperature recorded at the Wisconsin Michigan company plant this year was 86 degrees. The highest mark at the plant during the 24 hours preceding 9 o'clock this morning was 83 degrees while the lowest was 63 degrees.

Swimmers this morning were preparing to enjoy the afternoon at the nearest swimming hole to get that coat of tan started after a long delay while Old Sol hid behind glum skies for the last two weeks. And if the local showers and cooler weather predicted hold off long enough there ought to be many a sunburned back by sundown.

Phoenix, Ariz., with 102, and Yellowstone, with 34 were the hottest and coldest places in the nation yesterday.

Shooting Suspect Found Dead in Car

Salesman Believed to Have Wounded Love Rival Takes Own Life

GALENA, Ill.—(AP)—Lawrence Read, 46, who Sheriff Percy Hutchinson said critically wounded a rival for the affections of an 18-year-old waitress, was found dead in his automobile near Darlington, Wis., late yesterday afternoon.

The discovery of the body of Theodore Marriott, a farmer, ended a widespread search for the missing man. Sheriff Hutchinson said Marriott was married and the father of five. Marriott found Read sitting in the car about three miles southeast of Darlington. A hose attached to the exhaust pipe carried carbon monoxide fumes into the car. A note in the car read "this is the quickest way out."

The man wounded was Frank Keely, 43, a Nora, Ill., grocer. He was shot in the head and neck while sitting in his car Thursday night with Alice Campbell. Keely was taken to a hospital at Freeport. Sheriff Hutchinson said Read, who was a salesman for a chemical company, had been attentive to Miss Campbell for some time but that recently they quarreled over a new suit.

The shooting occurred on the outskirts of Nora. Several hours later Deputy Sheriff Leland fired at Read's car.

Sheriff Hutchinson said the note found in Read's car requested he be buried in Darlington.

City Officials and Street Department Teams to Tangle

The newly formed city officials' softball team will tangle with the street department squad in a practice battle at 10 o'clock Sunday morning at Pierce park.

Although the officials haven't played a game, many of them believe they are pretty good and are telling around city hall that the street department hasn't a chance.

No word has been heard from the department boys, who are keeping quiet (the lull before the storm) and are believed to have been practicing at some secluded spot. Not even their leader, Lawrence Reinke, who can give an extemporaneous speech practically any subject, has said a word about his lineup.

Claude N. Greisch, deputy health officer, who will hurl for the officials, was out in the backyard this afternoon warming up his salary bone.

Alderman McGillan, captain of the squad, known as Twinkle Toes to his friends, has purchased a nice pretty red baseball cap and said today he hopes the rest of his squad will do likewise.

The officials' team has a game scheduled with Fond du Lac city officers in July.

SNOW LOADING MACHINE BECOMES DIRT LOADER IN SUMMER

The city's snow loading machine which was inactive for several years because it was believed to be inefficient, was put to work on Lorain street this morning loading dirt onto trucks. The winter before last the machine hit the headlines when a former street department administration opposed the use of the loader for removing snow from College avenue. After a council fight the machine was ordered out and proved itself many times faster than men. Officials said this morning the machine also will be used to load gravel and stone chips this summer, another new use for the loader, which is shown above at work on Lorain street. (Post-Crescent Photo)

City's Snow Loading Machine Is Used to Load Dirt, Gravel

Appleton's snow loader, the machine that was inactive for several years because a former street department administration believed men were faster and more efficient, has hit the headlines again.

The machine was put to work this morning loading dirt on Lorain street and loading it with the same efficiency it loaded snow when it was given a chance. Gene Harris, assistant street commissioner, said this morning the loader also will be used to load gravel and stone chips on to trucks this summer.

Use of the loader is another move by the department administration to put efficiency into the street department with the resulting reduction in expenses. The loader moved a pile of dirt a block long in about an hour this morning.

The machine versus men controversy was of real interest in Appleton the winter before last when the loader was used to move snow on College avenue after a layoff of several years, a period during which men were used for the work.

At that time some of the city's aldermen and the previous department administration contended that men could load trucks just as fast as the machine. For weeks bystanders lined men and the machine at work and it was found it took a crew of five men from 8 to 15 minutes to load a truck while the machine did the job in about 15 minutes.

The snow loader is about 14 years old and deteriorated some while it stood around the street department barns doing nothing. The loading machinery has been repaired and is in fair shape. However, the tractor which gives the loader power is practically worn out and officials are talking about buying a new one. The tractor was used for several years for odd jobs, towing machinery, plowing snow and other work.

ing" Senator Taft (R-Ohio) asserted that "there is nothing self-liquidating about a foreign loan."

The lending program provides that proceeds from the loans would be spent in this country, but Senator Adams (D-Colo.) told reporters that "we ought to know by now that we can't buy business."

Democratic leaders in house and senate began drafting an omnibus measure for introduction early next week.

At the two-hour White House conference late yesterday, 14 executive officials and legislative chiefs went over with the president the entire proposal to authorize federal lending of $3,000,000,000 over seven years to public and semi-public bodies for the construction of "self-liquidating" projects and add $800,000,000 to the United States Housing Authority's borrowing power for loans and subsidies on low cost housing.

Not In Budget
Disbursements under the program would not be included in the regular treasury budget. Various agencies of the government would borrow the money on the open market and make the loans. The government would guarantee the agencies' securities, however.

One of the conferees, Chairman Harrison (D-Miss.) of the senate finance committee, told reporters there was a "quite insistent" demand at the White House for immediate action.

Barkley said the new consolidated federal works and federal loan agencies, which become operative July 1 under the president's reorganization plan, would handle much of the program.

Senator Borah (R-Idaho) contended today that the United States should demand that South American nations meet present obligations outstanding in this country before extending them any new credits.

Borah Against Plan
Addressing the senate in opposition to a provision of President Roosevelt's new lending program, Borah said:

"This may be turning over vast sums of taxpayers' money for South American politicians to play with. That's what has been happening in the past."

Borah said that some of the southern nations had received loans from the government's export-import bank on condition that defaulted loans and bonds be paid, and then failed to keep this obligation.

Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) interrupted Borah to say that most of the defaulted South American obligations "were not those of the governments. He contended they were securities of municipalities."

Barkley replied that these loans had been made to finance purchases of exports from the United States, such as agricultural products and manufactured goods.

on one cheek; of his shooting Hall without warning and dumping the body on an unoccupied farm, and of the killer's driving around with her a prisoner in the car for eight hours, meanwhile making love to her and finally releasing her in Grand Rapids on a promise of a "date."

Some of the details in her account which had perplexed police, were corroborated by a coroner's report of an autopsy on Hall's body.

Miss Doty said Hall lived for some time after being shot and died in her arms. The detectives wondered why there was no bloodstain on the automobile seat or her clothing.

But Dr. G. L. G. Cramer, Shawassaw county coroner in whose jurisdiction the body was found, said the post mortem indicated that Hall had lived 15 or 20 minutes and died from internal hemorrhages and a punctured left lung. This, he added, explained the absence of bloodstains.

An automobile robe covered the front seat, Miss Doty said, and the body was wrapped in such a robe when found. Hall's coat had been removed but was across his legs. The young woman related that the hitch-hiker had ransacked it, taking a small amount of money and Hall's watch.

The bullet which killed Hall, shot in the back, was turned over to state ballistics experts after the autopsy. They said it apparently was from a .32-caliber Spanish pistol.

Miss Doty told Marmon, he related, that the killer ordered her to help him in removing fingerprints from Hall's automobile before abandoning it in Grand Rapids.

Married at 16

From Miss Doty Captain Marmon said he learned that she had been married in Shreveport, La., to a 28-year-old man when she was 16-years-old. Their two children died in infancy and they were divorced 10 years ago. Three years later, she related, she met Hall in Louisiana and came north to be bookkeeper for his holding company, the Hal-Ber-Cole and Gas Corporation.

She quit work three years ago. Marmon continued, and since that time had lived at Pinconning as Mrs. Ruby Hall, Captain Marmon quoted her as adding that she and Hall had "been very good friends" during that time and she generally accompanied him on business trips.

Hall was married. His wife and their two children, Theodore, 18, a college student, and Jean, 7, were spending the summer at an Oakland county lake. Their home is in Detroit.

CHICAGO'S FIGHT AGAINST DISASTER

The Chicago metropolitan area lost about 300 factories in the two year period prior to 1938. And its Association of Commerce is putting on a drive to bring more industries with their lucrative payrolls into its territory.

Whenever Wisconsin lost an industry the Chicago Tribune exercised the right of a free press to paint a harrowing description of our factories driven from pillar to post by relentless politicians bleeding them white until, to escape the death-blow they had to move out.

We don't think Wisconsin is perfection or is even headed that way. Sometimes it has enacted legislation that was a considerable burden and occasionally a great hardship to industry. It may have lost some plants on that account. Spreading broadcast lurid misrepresentations about its policies probably kept other industries out. But it has attempted in a matter of fact manner to get at the truth because its people are so constituted fundamentally they will not tolerate gross injustice nor a studied attempt to wrong some for the presumed advantage of others.

But if the Chicago area really is serious about preserving its industries and attracting new ones it should make an accurate investigation of why it is trembling for its future, and why Wisconsin isn't.

The Wisconsin industrialist although often annoyed and sometimes fuming stayed in Wisconsin. It would surprise the Chicago Tribune to know how much conditions in the Chicago metropolitan area strengthened the resolve of the Wisconsin industrialist to stay in Wisconsin. For a good business man never flies from troubles with which he is familiar to embrace troubles of which he knows not until he removes the uncertainty by investigation. And what Wisconsin industrialists found about Illinois made them much more contented with Wisconsin.

We must be the last to hide our faults. Only fools would deny them. But it is the timorous who would conceal their virtues.

We doubt whether there is a state in the union with a record as clean as Wisconsin's in relation to racketeers. And racketeers cost industries elsewhere great sums of money.

Where is a state with a better record in its courts for justice than Wisconsin? The cost of political judges to industries in Illinois that must occasionally go to court over disputed rights is certainly tremendous.

Wisconsin has only an occasional professional criminal walking its highways. Its remedy for a situation that makes Illinois unhealthy is to banish both politics and slobberism in handling its criminal element.

Labor unions in Illinois, and particularly the Chicago area, are often dominated by ex-convicts. There would be a small rebellion in Wisconsin if the people were ever to learn that such a situation existed here. Thanks largely to the rank and file of labor Illinois tactics that have had their influence in driving factories out and abolishing lucrative payrolls could not even get a toehold in the Badger state.

The Post-Crescent is not crowing over the discomfiture in the Chicago area. But the situation would provide the text for a very interesting sermon upon how well and permanently a state builds when it tenaciously adheres to those indispensable principles of fair play that tend more than any single thing to make a contented people.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

The vote in the House on the relief bill is a reflection of a public opinion that is becoming a bit grim and determined.

The new act is drawn to make conditions rather complex for those who are deliberately attempting to make a livelihood or a profession out of work relief. And by abolishing the Theatre Project there is a direct blow at the mummbling radicals who delighted in presenting various phases of immorality to the public gaze. There is a feeling that has become equally strong that the Theatre Project was employed largely by the radical element to take on a certain flashing and cavalier air as an aid to organizing dependent people into an attempt to make their dependence permanent.

And yet, while these are indications of the way the wind is blowing, there seems to be, as we read it, a studied attempt upon the part of congress to give Mr. Roosevelt substantially what he asks for by way of relief so that there may be no alibi whatever for the dark and tragic termination of his administration. That carries politics, of course. But if the country could stand the experiments, if it could take the arsenic without major convulsions, it can continue a little longer as the poison dose is not increased. It is one way of trying to convince the patient.

SALES TAXES AT MADISON

The men who offered the proposed general sales tax for Wisconsin have been cutting their teeth in politics.

The way everyone affected swooped down upon Madison to protest against any further infliction upon them should make the proponents of the bill write out and frame one of the first rules of politics in relation to taxation—never take a big bite.

Aesop learned this thought when the world was very young and he told it in that fable about the lion who was altogether too cautious to attack a drove of bulls at one time but waited until in their grazing they were widely separated and pounced upon one at a time and while the others were out of hearing.

If the managers of the bill at Madison had merely proposed a sales tax on new automobiles we might all have agreed that it was a shame to kick this industry in the shins but would have shrugged our shoulders and gone our numerous ways feeling relieved that it wasn't our business that was chilled with the ice cold demand of the commonwealth.

The same observation may be repeated in relation to cigars, liquors or theatres. Singly each might have succumbed. Together their voice was like the booming of an angry ocean.

Many of Mr. Heil's friends are new in this business of making laws, and, like their leader, thought it was just a matter of writing words, one after another. In no undertaking in life is there so much of the intangible and undefinable. Flashing of lightning in the air or at the capital occur in much the same manner. Our eyes perceive the results even though we do not see the forces of nature that create them.

It may be suggested to the governor and his followers that they get Aesop out and read carefully, smacking upon every word. When they want more taxes single out a small portion of the population, separate them from the rest and put the branding irons on them. And as the reek of burning flesh cuts their throat deliver that old pious promise: This is only temporary, a sort of an emergency measure and will be repealed shortly.

And it will be repealed, too, on the very day that chickens fly over the moon.

THE PRESIDENT'S GOOD SUGGESTION

The President's proposal of another spending program involving nearly four billions must not be discarded upon the assumption that it is as impractical and unworthy as most Roosevelt financial proposals. For in some respects it is quite the opposite.

Mr. Roosevelt lays stress upon "self-liquidating public works." This substantial part of his proposal is entirely sound. It could be made of destructive effect only if the selection of "self-liquidating public works" be unprotected from visionaries in general and New Deal political engineers in particular.

A great part of this country needs modern sewage systems. And localities that need them can also afford to pay for them through the small but certain processes of taxation over a 20 year period. There are hundreds of places in America where toll bridges could be built to the great convenience of the public who would willingly pay the usually small fee to use them but a fee that would retire their cost of construction over a reasonable period of years. Here are but two examples the number of which could be materially lengthened.

In the class of loan proposals financed by the government there is plenty of latitude to create and maintain thousands of full-time decent wage jobs in the railway equipment field alone. Obviously the railroads cannot finance themselves under prevailing conditions. But they can pay rental for equipment and liquidate the obligation over a ten to twenty year period. The railroads that have presented the public with new and modern trains have demonstrated they can make them pay. It should be remembered that few spots in this country have the passenger railway service provided for this section of Wisconsin.

Let us hope that the shadow from the many juvenile and visionary schemes emanating from Washington will not fall athwart this latest proposal which, properly handled, may be put to very practical use. Its principal deterrent today lies in our huge debt already created and the proceeds from which have been so largely wasted.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

THE ROAD HOME

The road home is the thoroughfare
We traveled when we went Away from home! But now how fair
It seems, and how content
We are to travel back again!
Though we were glad to go.
We turn with light hearts down the lane
That leads to fields we know.
The sun seems brighter on the trees
Than when we went away.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—There is no particular sense in a man's living more than 95 years, as far as life insurance is concerned, on account of the insurance companies won't give you credit for being alive anyway. Comes your 96th birthday. You blow out the 96 candles (no simple thing at 96) and the insurance fellow will mail you a check, just like you were dead.

They've got it figured out, and they don't permit events to disturb their mathematics. They figure if you aren't dead at 96, you ought to be. In other words, they give up; and the dough is yours. What fun you can have with it at 96 is your problem.)

There is an Institute of Life Insurance in town—a sort of informational holding concern for most of the big companies—and that's how I found out there's no insurance advantage in living beyond 96. Nearly three-fourths of the total insurable population—72.8 per cent—have some sort of insurance. The total amount of their policies is $110,000,000,000—enough to take a cozy little vacation if you watch your pennies. The Institute told me a lot more stuff, but it was all about billions of dollars, same being anathema to me, and also Greek.

People and Places: Sinclair Lewis tripping over his cane and looking very red-faced as he emerges from a Norman Bel Geddes exhibit at the Fair; Elliott Roosevelt dining at the Italian Pavilion; Bill Killefer coaching on the first base line for the Brooklyn Dodgers—he used to catch for Paw Paw High school when I was the bad boy of the senior class; Ed Wynn, whose comedy has been silent too long, looking worried as he swings down East 54th Street; Jack White, the Life of the Party at his Club 18, sitting in the bleachers at the Polo Grounds, rooting his throat raw for the Lost Cause of the Giants; and Rudy Vallee hurrying through the Astor lobby, late for his appearance on the Roof.

Michael Quinn is the young man who keeps the deer at the Bronx Zoo. It was his father's job for years, and when the older man died his son, now only 24, took over. We were talking the other day. I asked him if he ever went deer hunting. I wondered if a man whose job was tending these graceful, innocent-eyed animals could also enjoy killing them.

"Yes, I went deer hunting last autumn," he said. "A beautiful buck appeared just ahead of me. He was a beauty. I put the gun to my shoulder. Then a funny thing happened. I couldn't pull the trigger. I just couldn't. The buck strolled away. I guess having lived with deer all my life, fed them and cared for them, has spoiled me as a huntsman. I can't bring myself to shooting them."

The Hollywood Restaurant, once one of the most popular night spots on Broadway, appears finally to have surrendered. There was a time when the best dance bands and the prettiest girls appeared there. Times changed. Some substantial fortunes were dropped in efforts to put the color back in the Hollywood's cheeks. Last winter a final attempt was made, but about the only things that came around were isinglass envelopes on the first of the month; so they put up the shutters.

Into town during the winter came Johnny McMahon, one of those Chicago boys full of vim and vigor. He took over the Hollywood, put men to work remodeling it, and is just about ready to open what he says will be a permanent "Odditorium" there. "I'll even change Broadway to Oddway," he exclaimed, enthusiastically. This will be all right with me. It should have been done a long time ago.

McMahon was just another guy called Mac who the Chicago Fair opened in 1933. He was manager of the Streets of Paris at that great cultural exposition. His greatest contribution to art and learning was to take a comely young lady and a pair of fans. The lady was Sally Rand. One of the things Johnny hopes to do at the Odditorium as an evidence of his devotion to culture, is to bring up from Peru the six-year-old Indian girl who became a mother a few weeks ago. Johnny says there have been a horde of money hungry promoters trying to sign up the little lady and her offspring, but that she believes right will triumph and that she will accept his proposition. If she does, there will be a special hospital room for her, nurses, doctors, and a home for her mother. "A Carnival of Culture!" cries Johnny. H-m-m-m.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — It would be hard to find a piece of legislation carrying more armor against attack than the new relief bill piloted through the House.

Grover

The House Appropriations committee knew it would find hearty opposition to any bill handed out of relief spending, so it fell back for assistance on a device as old as the Congress— an investigation. Nearly every piece of "liberal" legislation is preceded by a harrowing investigation to present to the public eye the evils to be trodden down.

This time the direction was somewhat the reverse of "liberal" as that term is interpreted these days. The committee had decided to be less liberal. It would abolish some of the "left wing" features that had crept into the relief business, such as the federal theatre project and the writers project. Also it would write into the bill some restraints on the administration of relief. And the committee decided that if an investigation was useful to the goose it could be used by the gander.

Probably most subject to public criticism was the federal theatre project, centered largely in New York. The committee brought in witnesses who testified that it was a "hotbed of communism."

Representative Woodrum of Virginia, who headed the investigation, also presented the bill to the House as acting chairman of the appropriations committee. He laid the whip on the theatre project. He held out one of its productions, "Sing for Your Supper," as a horrible example. He thought it was naughty. And out went the theatre project.

"If there is a line in it that contributes to American culture," he said, "I will eat the whole manuscript (he held it up to view). And it cost over $200,000 to produce."

Next in order the committee went after those who were described as making a career out of WPA. They discovered that 17 per cent of WPA employees in the country had been on the payroll for three years or more. In New York City, 44 per cent had been on WPA for three years or more.

So they ordered a rotation of jobs. Those who have been on a long time will have to move off for a spell while some other deserving person goes on the payroll—that is, if the Senate approves what the House has done.

New York City evidently was in for the stiffest trimming and the committee armed itself with evidence. It disclosed that some place in a park improvement project was an appropriation for a WPA exhibit at the World fair. Moreover, it found that skilled workmen not on the relief rolls had been permitted to work long enough to earn $200 to $250 a month of WPA money where the top earnings were supposed to be limited to $85.

Vociferous criticism has come from the country districts that the city relief rolls were faster than out at the cross roads. So a new system of apportioning the relief money among the states was framed to remedy that in part.

The one-man rule by Harry Hopkins prior to his appointment as secretary of commerce also had been a bright target for critics, so under the new bill a three-man board would administer WPA.

The committee did not get by without a struggle. After the first day of debate in the House the emergency session and work out some compromise to save major revisions in the relief set-up. To knock out in the future such things as the $500,000 World fair exhibit it had drafted a limitation of $25,000 on each project. It had to back away from that and lift the limit to $50,000.

The committee didn't reduce the sum asked by the president, which will provide only about 2,000,000 jobs instead of the 3,000,000 during the greater part of the current year. But the net result of the committee effort was to screw down tighter the relief faucet which had been partly closed by the president in the budget.

WELL I'LL TELL YOU

Before many more months we're going to have another big political campaign. Both political parties are going to lambast each other and cause hard feeling all around. I only hope who ever's elected President won't have European countries channin' Uncle Sam's name to Uncle Sammaritan, if a war starts over there.

When Gus Biggers was running for Constable down home one year he went out to Uncle Sam's place and said, "Here Slug, I've held that mule while you shoe it. By the way, I'm running for Constable this year — and I'd like to have your vote. Naturally, you know I'm a better man than my three opponents."

Slug said, "I don't know about that. One of 'em's in the barn milkin' my cow, the second one is buggin' the potatoes and the third is inside rocking the baby."

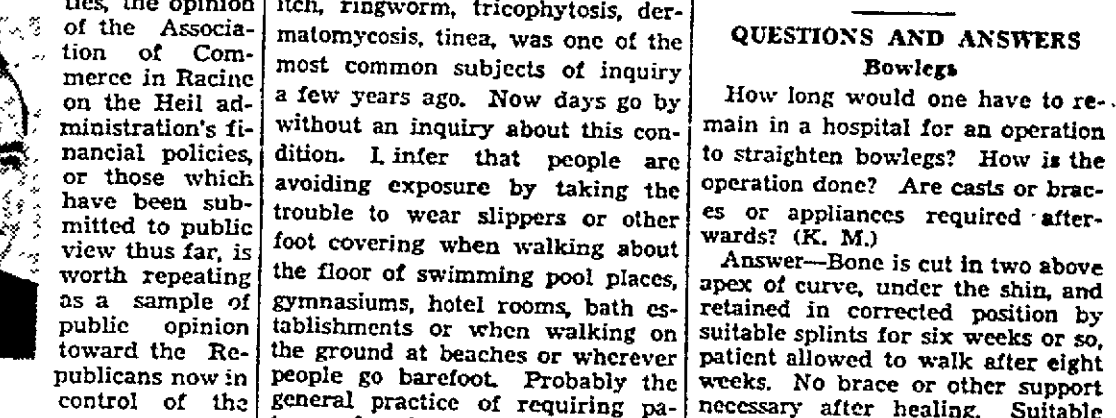

WHO SAYS THE WAGNER ACT NEEDS OVERHAULING?

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — Because it is the spokesman for organized business in one of Wisconsin's principal cities, the opinion of the Association of Commerce in Racine on the Heil administration's financial policies, or those which have been submitted to public view thus far, is worth repeating as a sample of public opinion toward the Republicans now in control of the statehouse.

Wyngaard

The Association, in a circular letter received by members of the administration, including the governor himself, expresses a definite and plain-spoken opposition to the new tax bill proposed by the Republicans, because: The condition of all private business is such that it cannot stand any increase in taxes now until conditions generally improve.

The fact that the state government has adopted a budget in excess of income is unwise and unwarranted, as manifested by the 65,000 home foreclosures in Wisconsin.

The proposal to increase taxes on dividends is entirely unsound because the present dividend tax rate is diverting into other states capital investments which should be used for the creation of more taxable jobs and wealth at home.

"STRICTLY NECESSARY" The Racine business group demanded that the Heil administration raise only "strictly necessary" revenue, and moreover, recommended strongly that an interim committee be chosen to study the piecemeal tax structure, codify the state laws and find ways of drastically reducing the costs of the state government to the means of the citizens of the state to support it.

DELEGATE CANDIDATE Mark Catlin Jr., assemblyman from Outagamie county and a floor leader of the Republican majority in the lower house, will be a candidate for district delegate to the Republican national convention next year from the Eighth congressional district.

Some of the Appleton man's friends, who are now completing his second term in the legislature, will watch with interest the support which his delegate candidacy wins, with a view of putting him forward as a candidate for congress, if not in 1940, two years later.

G. O. P. CONVENTION Although the details remain to be settled, Republican organization men are showing a keen interest in the forthcoming Republican state convention which will be held, it has been learned, shortly after September 15.

From the gleanings which this column has been able to find from Republican leaders who don't talk much about it, there will be an attempt made to reorganize the state party machine from stem to stern, with a good possibility that there will be a chance in the faces which have managed the organization during the last year.

It is planned, it is said, to subordinate the statutory committee, closely hemmed in by law in its activities, and to organize a new state committee which will boss the next campaign. The differences which have characterized the party during late years, generally aroused by rival claims for leadership by mem-

FOOT ITCH AGAIN

Trench foot, athlete's foot, foot itch, ringworm, trichophytosis, dermatomycosis, tinea, was one of the most common subjects of inquiry a few years ago. Now days go by without an inquiry about this condition. I infer that people are avoiding exposure by taking the trouble to wear slippers or other foot covering when walking about the floor of swimming pool places, gymnasiums, hotel rooms, bath establishments or when walking on the ground at beaches or wherever people go barefoot. Probably the general practice of requiring patrons of such places to step into a footbath of one or another parasiticide or fungicidal solution has helped to reduce the prevalence of foot itch.

The condition is due to the growth of a fungus in the skin. This fungus is present in fine scales that drop off from the affected skin. The scales readily contain the fungus to the skin of the next person to tread on the spot barefoot.

The fungus may live in the lining of the shoes in the stocking for days, weeks or months. Whenever any treatment is applied for the relief or cure of foot itch, it is necessary to treat the linings of all shoes that have been worn since contracting the disease. If this is not done, reinfection is quite likely. Reinfection may occur when shoes are worn again after an interval of several months — say some white shoes put away at the end of a summer season and worn again the next season.

One good fungicide for the lining of shoes is plain gasoline (not fancy stuff). Pour an ounce or two in each shoe, swish it about to moisten the whole lining of the shoes particularly, and drain it into the next shoe, and then set the shoes in an open air place to dry.

Another good fungicide, which is also excellent for correcting foul odor when there is excessive sweating of the feet, is formaldehyde. Formaldehyde is strong stuff and will burn and irritate skin if applied undiluted. The standard Formaldehyde Solution (Liquor Formaldehydi) contains about 37 per cent of formaldehyde, a strong germicide, disinfectant and preservative. One ounce of this standard formaldehyde solution may be diluted with from four to eight ounces of water and thus diluted it may be applied to the soles of the feet once or twice a week, and allowed to dry. An ounce or two of the diluted formaldehyde solution may be poured in each shoe and swished around to moisten the insole and the lining of the toe, then drained into the next shoe. After this bath the shoes should be allowed to dry in open air at least 24 hours before they are worn again. Formaldehyde does not injure cloth, fabric, leather or color. It has a characteristic odor which disappears with drying.

The treatment of foot itch or athlete's foot is dealt with in detail in a monograph any reader may have on request. Enclose a three-cent stamp.

Be A Careful Driver

Dear Madam:

Could you use one more quart of milk per week? If you knew that such a move on your part would help in solving the economic problems of the dairy farmers, who are supplying this market with milk, we believe you would be willing and glad to co-operate in such a movement.

If we can get the co-operation of every household, it will go a long way in eliminating the surplus of milk — a surplus that now has to be converted into butter, cheese and other dairy products — to be dumped on an already overstocked market, and further reduce the present low prices on those products.

Every time you buy an extra quart of milk, an extra bottle of cream, etc., you are helping in eliminating this surplus, and also helping in making life more liveable for the dairy farmer and his family. Let's make their well-being our concern!

MODEST MAIDENS

"Oh, that's nothing. You should see the bicycle!"

Author of Contemporary History Book Says Greed Causes Unrest

By Jean Wiley Thickens

"DAYS OF OUR YEARS" by Pierre Van Paassen. In this column a couple of weeks ago, was reviewed (and recommended) "Inside Europe," by John Gunther, because it gave the reader such a well rounded and comprehensive view of the political situation in Europe today. In order to secure a reliable background which explains in large part the causes of the present international chaos one should next read "Days of Our Years," by Pierre Van Paassen.

Mr. Van Paassen is a Hollander who, with his parents, emigrated to Canada when a young man and later joined the Canadian army during the World War, though his native Holland was neutral. His book is superficially an autobiography, though after the first three or four hundred pages he has entirely subordinated his own personal history to the record of world events as he observed them in various countries in his capacity as correspondent for several European and Canadian newspapers. He is strongly partisan though he tempers that partisanship by faithfully presenting both sides of events as he witnessed them in France, Germany, Ethiopia, Italy, Palestine and North Africa. He paints a picture of his early experiences as a young missionary among the ignorant and dirty Ruthenian farmers in Western Canada; of the near-civil war in France in 1917 when the French police refused longer to throw away their lives that the French and German munitions manufacturers might continue paying large dividends to stockholders; he describes the flourishing slave trade in Ethiopia by means of which Haile Selassie replenished his royal treasury each year; he paints an idyllic picture of life in a small French village where his most intimate associate was the village grave digger, who had inherited the office from his father and his grandfather. He tells his readers of a native night club in North Africa where the dancing girls put on nude dances for the benefit of wealthy and recently deceased villagers who are transported by their families, on the backs of camels, to witness the wild performances by the light of smoking torches.

Experiences in Spain
Probably the most interesting and enlightening section of this extraordinary book is that which is devoted to his experiences in Spain during the recent civil war.

It clears up various hitherto vague points in the reader's mind as to who were the royalists, and who the actual victims. Also who stands to profit most richly through the defeat of the Royalists. He paints a picture of Franco which coincides very closely with the one given by John Gunther. Both writers show clearly that Franco is merely a willing pawn for the machinations of Hitler and Mussolini, and is not for a moment animated by any impulses of patriotism or common decency.

Mr. Van Paassen's final conclusion is that greed, both national and individual, is the cause of all the unrest in Europe and Asia today, and not until statesmen, politicians, a short illness.

Ace and King Of Trump Drop On One Trick

BY ELY CULBERTSON
"Dear Mr. Culbertson: This happened in one of those family dub games and provided a lot of fun for the North-South pair. I am pleased to report that my wife and I were in those positions.

"North, dealer.
"Both sides vulnerable
"Rubber bridge.

NORTH

♦ Q 5 4 3
♣ A K J 8 5

EAST
♠ Q J 2
♥ K Q J 10 8
♦ A
♣ Q 10 7 6

WEST

SOUTH
♠ A K 7 5 3
♦ 10 8 7 6

"This was 'friendly' rubber bridge, with both sides vulnerable and both just as willing to lose a right eye as to lose the rubber. Both stretching a little the bidding was:

North East South West
1 club 1 heart 1 spade 4 hearts
Pass Pass 5 diamonds Pass

"To explain this bidding at least, partly, let me give you some idea of the caliber of players involved. South, myself, scored 728 in your last self-rating examination. West was too good to take the examination, in his own opinion. North took the examination, but is not bragging about her score. East plays as the spirit moves her.

"West led his fourth best heart and East won. After much bawling wringing East returned the spade queen. Declarer won and led a low diamond, hoping for a miracle. West's celebration was almost verbal. He's pulling a fast one. He thinks I'm dumb enough to duck and lose my jack to the queen. Then he'll collar my king with the ace. O no, not this baby! Up with the king.

"As East's ace dropped on the same trick, East remarked with just a trace of acerbity: 'Well, we certainly took that trick all right!' And that ended a very pleasant evening!

"S. M. R., Chicago."

The ace and king of trump dropping on one trick is a spectator that haunts most bridge players and causes shivers of apprehension. There are times when it is very difficult to know whether to play the king from K-x or to duck and permit partner's possible ace to win separately. In this case the dilemma never should have arisen, because East should have laid down the diamond ace immediately upon winning the first trick. There was no conceivable reason for East to hold the singleton ace, and although she could not anticipate what was to occur, a play that has nothing wrong with it is almost always automatically correct. I must say, however, that it was astonishing that East should have been on lead at the first trick, because West's undeclared ace and five other hearts was, to put it mildly, peculiar. It is correct to lead the fourth highest of partner's suit under most circumstances, but this does not apply when the leader has the ace. There is entirely too much chance that the opponent may have the singleton king which, of course, would make the undeclared ace a catastrophe.

All of this, however, is not an attempt to justify West's play of the diamond king on declarer's first lead toward dummy. West should have known that South would not have led a low diamond if he had held the ace. Surely, South must have at least five diamonds for his bid at the five level. Holding the A x x x x, he could not be deliriously enough to realize that a low diamond lead would put West on the spot and would make the much more natural play of laying down the ace.

Good Taste Today

GUEST OF HONOR
Dear Mrs. Post: A friend is giving a large afternoon tea in my honor. She is wearing a long afternoon dress and no hat because her party will be at home. Two of her intimate friends are going to sit at the tea table and pour tea and chocolate. I am especially interested in my clothes as to whether I too should wear a "tonic" dress, and go without a hat. And her friends who are pouring would like me to ask about their clothes, too. Will you answer these questions for all of us?

Answer: Correctly, you wear a hat, and a long dress. But if the hostess were wearing a short one it would be best to do the same. The fact that she does not wear a hat does not prevent your wearing one if you'd like to. Those who pour at a tea table generally wear hats, but again this depends upon local customs which of course vary in different communities. The more formal the community the more likely is everyone to wear a hat.

Wording of Shower Invitation
Dear Mrs. Post: I'm giving a shower for a newly married friend. In filling in the ready-worded invitations that I have just brought at the stationer's, shall I write her name as Mrs. John Newlywed or Mary Newlywed?

Answer: "Mary Newlywed."

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

This exquisite bride wears a gown designed by one of our leading cosmeticians. It is a modernized version of the popular Empire influence.

This summer's brides are more picturesque than ever in their traditional satin gowns with the Empire influence predominating. Probably the visit of England's Queen to our shores has had something to do with the vogue, for our young ladies will look as if they stepped right out of a past century in England. Waists are tiny as can be, necks may be high or low, but sleeves are dramatic. The leg-of-mutton being very much favored. Bouffant skirts, embroidered, be-ribboned and ruffled, call for long trailing veils of ancient lace and tiny sprays of orange blossoms. Quite naturally creamy complexions, and faint blushes are an essential part of the fascinating bridal picture.

If you are to be married in such a traditional wedding gown, do not march down to the altar in a sun-baked skin. Protect your fairness with your life and have a series of facials during the two weeks before the ceremony. Circulation creams and masques to soften and bleach your skin, pore cream to refine it, chin straps to firm the muscles—all these will help you to be a more beautiful bride.

Then have on hand a pick-up treatment for the big day may be hot and your nerves a bit frazzled; would be written since nobody would be asked excepting people who call her by her first name. A shower, in other words, is too intimate a party to follow formal requirements.

Day Clothes at an Evening Wedding
Dear Mrs. Post: My son is being married several hundred miles from where we live, and the wedding is taking place in the evening. Ordinarily we would certainly have worn our best evening clothes, but my son tells us that relatives are wearing street-length day dresses and the men ordinary day suits. This does seem very strange to us at an eight o'clock wedding and I wonder whether your advice would be that of "when in Rome..." And with day clothes in the evening, shall I wear a hat?

Answer: I would by all means suggest an afternoon dress of conservative street length. I think a simple dress that has all its importance in the detail of its cut rather than in its trimmings, would be best. The hat you wear could be one of the gay, small variety that is really nothing more than an arrangement of flowers, or flat feathers or leaves or even ribbon bows, adjusted as to position and outline to be becoming to you. Since even the ushers are to wear ordinary day suits it is necessary that your husband do the same. Plain dark blue probably, with white shirt and starched-looking collar and a plain tie.

Many Things Pilfered Under Guise of Souvenir Collecting

BY ANGELO PATRI

There seems to be a loosening of accepted restrictions upon behavior among some groups of young people and it does not tend to assure us of the honor and security of their future. They are casual about telling lies, casual about respect for other people's belongings. And often they are young people who have had education and good home backgrounds.

A group of young men and women sponsored by a college professor, whose students most of them were, visited a country house for the day. The whole house and the grounds were opened to them without reservation. They had a pleasant time and seemed to enjoy it hugely. After they had left for home it was discovered that little things had been taken out of the house among them a bit of antique bronze valued for its associations as well as for its artistic quality. The pen had been taken from the library table. Odds and ends, such as untrained children might have taken on a fancy to, had gone along with the guests, all of them apparently in their right minds and of the age of discretion.

When the doctor made a visit to us one day he took out a lead pencil instead of his fountain pen to write a prescription. "I can't keep a fountain pen. I lay it down; I'm busy, and when I look for it, it's gone. I've given up and now use lead pencils. Same with thermometers. Can't keep them—and scissors. I've seen my scissors on the tables of my patients."

The same sort of thing happens to hotel and restaurant keepers. They lose bits of silver, linen and even soap. Stationery is taken by the handful by casual visitors in shops and hotels so that often there is none left for the actual guests.

"You've kept it in the office and give it only on request of the guest," said the clerk.

The idea seems to be that these little things do not count. They are trifles against which no moral credits or debts are to be charged. Yet, stealing is stealing and dishonesty is nothing but its own ugly self.

The Ten Commandments are still in force and they still impose restrictions upon ladies and gentlemen of the world over. It is not considered good behavior, it is not regarded as good manners, this looting of other people's property. It is condemned by all decent people, and those who indulge in it are not trusted. They are not accepted as people one cares to know in any relation whatever.

We must teach the children and advise the young people about this and emphasize once more the strict line that is drawn between honesty and dishonesty, decent behavior and indecent behavior. We must speak out and condemn the practice when it comes under our observation lest the children begin to accept it as the thing to do. We are too polite, too tolerant of wrongdoing these days, and because of our laxness we are encouraging wrong thinking and wrong-doing in the younger groups.

If public opinion condemned the practice of pilfering things under the guise of collecting souvenirs a lot of this dishonesty would cease. In short, if we called stealing stealing, and the thief a thief, things would improve in this direction in short order. And the children would understand what we mean better than they do now when we gloss the ugly thing over with fine words.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

The Home Gardener

By Edwin H. Perkins

The fun of gardening does not always end with caring for purchased plants. As we have seen, there is little trouble and much fun in connection with raising our own, and this fun can be increased still further by beginning to have our own seeds.

Not every plant is worth the seeds it raises and the seeds of but a few are worth saving. That accounts for the seemingly high prices we pay for the little packets of seed offered to us in the shops.

Saving our own seeds is hardly a worthwhile financial affair but, from the angle of pleasure, the small care needed to save our own seeds is fully justified. It is now time to look over the earliest bloomers from which we might want duplicates, or near duplicates next season.

For seeding save only the most colorful and robust flowers. If the variety we want is characterized by smallness, select small well formed flowers. Select other plants according to the standards set for the variety. When advanced, we may attempt our own pollen treatments but the majority of us are satisfied with the fertilization done by insects which carry the pollen from flower to flower.

When the desired flowers are noted, they should be allowed to mature. When they start to dry, the seeds can be saved by wrapping the blooms, loosely, with cold linen clothes or cellophane. When the seeds are fully ripe and dry, cut the flowers from the plant remove the wrappings and store for use next season in properly marked paper bags. Cleaning, which consists of separating the seeds from chaff, is a good winter evening job.

Widow With Children Should Be Wary of Marrying 2nd Time

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—I was a widow with a little girl and I married a man who is indifferent to my child. He is not unkind to her. There is only that subtle something in his attitude toward her that is so difficult to explain, but that the little one and I are so intensely conscious of. At the present time I am supporting my child and it makes me wonder what the situation would be like if the time ever comes when he would have to assume the responsibility for her. Would his feeling, due to the fact that she was dependent on him, make his attitude grow less endurable? The thought persists that perhaps as the little one grows older she will feel that she is not wanted and either run away or make an undesirable marriage. The situation as it stands now is slowly forming a plan in my mind to take my daughter and leave. Happiness cannot exist under the present circumstances. What should I do? BELINDA.

Answer: That is a question you will have to settle for yourself. It would take the wisdom of a Solomon to tell a woman which one to choose when she must decide between her child and the child's stepfather, for so intricately are the heartstrings woven that whatever her choice it cannot fail to bring her sorrow.

It has always seemed to me that no woman is ever placed in so cruel a position as that of the mother who sees her children being mistreated, their very natures warped and their whole future lives endangered by the man she has placed over them as a second father. She loves the children who are bone of her bone and flesh of her flesh and for whom she feels all the more responsibility because they have no father and must look to her alone for protection.

Yet she is powerless to defend them. She doesn't dare even to show them the love and sympathy she feels for them, because her every gesture of tenderness will still further inflame the hatred of the man who represents the fact that his wife has loved and borne children to another man.

We hear a great deal about the cruel stepmother and very little about the cruel stepfather, yet stepfathers are even more inclined to be unkind to their stepchildren than are stepmothers to theirs. Especially is this the case if the children's father left them no money. Most men find their own families a burden to support. When it comes to taking on a ready-made family and paying for their food and clothing and having their teeth straightened and their adenoids out, all but the most generous of them visit their resentment upon the hapless little creature whose fate lies in their hands.

But, of course, jealousy is at the bottom of the treatment that the cruel stepfather accords his stepchildren. Men do not see their wives being foolish over their children and devoting their time to cooing and fussing over THEIR babies. They like to see THEIR children with their arms around their mothers' necks and to hear Mother sing them to sleep. But when it comes to another man's children on whom their wives lavish the devotion and attentions that they think belong to them, it is another story.

It is this question of how a stepfather will treat her children that every widow with children should consider long and carefully before she marries a second time. Because not only the children's welfare but her own happiness depends upon it.

And she does well to be suspicious, for because a man brings her little Johnny toys when he comes a-courting is no sign that he is not going to feel that it is his duty to "discipline" Johnny after he has married Johnny's pretty mamma.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a man 59 years of age. Have never been in love. Never married. Always lived with my mother, who passed away a while ago. I am beginning to feel very lonesome and in need of a companion. Do you think I am too old to marry? Naturally at my age my ways and ideas are set. Do you think that if I should marry I could make a woman happy? CARY.

Answer: Why not? Fifty-nine is just middle age in these times and in all probability you have many years of life before you. Provided they don't go haywire and pick out flappers and gigolos for wives and husbands. I am strong for middle-aged and elderly people marrying, because we all need companions during the last lap of our journey of life far more than we did at the beginning.

When we are young we can amuse ourselves by going places and doing things, and find plenty of boys and girls to play around with. But when we grow old and tired we want to sit by the fire of

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane

Psychologist, Northwestern University

Roberta doesn't kiss her own children and feels that she is a frigid wife. Do you think she can ever be changed into an affectionate wife and mother? Be sure to read her problem, for this case is not unusual.

CASE N-172: Roberta M., aged 31, has two children.

"I worry a great deal because I feel I am not a successful wife and mother," she announced at the beginning of our interview.

"But I don't seem to be as affectionate as other women. I don't even kiss my children goodnight, nor farewell when they leave for school. "And I'm not affectionate to my husband either. I love him and also my two children, but I just don't show the affection other wives do.

"Our marital relationship has never been enjoyable to me, either so I avoid it. I don't know whether this would have anything to do with my disposition, but I don't think so, for I was never affectionate before marriage.

Dr. Crane, is it possible for me to cultivate affection so that I can become a more satisfactory wife and mother?"

DIAGNOSIS:

Affectionateness is largely a matter of habit. Even the matter of kissing is an innovation which human beings have added to courtship. Animals and some races of mankind have rubbed noses as a sign of mutual interest, but the kiss is a human invention.

Much of our sexual behavior is a product of social custom and convention. A woman of normal health can be a frigid wife or a most affectionate one, depending upon how she has been educated.

This training in affection far antedates her wedding, she grew up in a home where there were few evidences of physical affection, such as kisses between parents or parents and their children, then she may be educated to a lack of these external evidences of love.

Were Indians Affectionate?
The Indian tribes which inhabited this continent at the time Columbus arrived, were apparently much less affectionate than our modern white men and women.

The rigorous training and dangerous life may have lessened the tender expressions of love. Marriage and mating can be a very abrupt, routine process, devoid of much coquetry and courtship, or it may be a very complex affair, consisting of formal introductions, billets-doux, candy and flowers, theater dates, and the like.

Some people are trained to shovel down their food with little attention to formalities of dinner etiquette. Others are connoisseurs of good foods. They admire and relish the appearance of the tasty dishes; then inhale the pleasant aromas, and finally taste each dish in an appreciative manner.

It depends largely on how we are trained, including our early childhood attitudes. A frigid woman may be one who as a child had her interest in men reduced by tales of a soured divorcee or a fearful spinster aunt.

Affection Is A Habit
"Act the way you'd like to be and soon you'll be the way you act." is a precept I have presented in a previous Case Record. It is very true regarding affection and love.

If you will go through the motions and recite the lines which are expected of you, then you ultimately become caught up in the emotions which are thereby induced.

This is one reason why movie actors fall in love with the actresses playing opposite them. They have gone through the love making until they actually feel the mood and attraction of the heroine.

If a mother trains herself to show some affection to her children, as by kissing them goodnight and good-bye, she not only will ultimately enjoy the process but will thereby prepare them for their later adult emotional life. Children should have some maternal affection.

Dr. Crane will give personal attention to questions on psychological matters. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for reply. Letting readers' names are never published.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

THE CHARACTERS

Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.

Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaciff.

Yesterday: Thorn closed the deal on what he thinks is oil land.

Chapter 25

The Rosewood Cabinet

The casts were removed from old Mack's legs on the fifteenth of October and he was allowed to hobble about a short while each day with the support of crutches. The doctor expressed wonder at the swiftness with which his bones had knit, but Gramp insisted:

"Fiddlerslicks! I'm tough and just in the prime o' life! I go years ahead o' me to pester folks and git 'em in trouble and out of it."

However, now that he was more self-sufficient, Jocelyn could think of no excuse to postpone her wedding again. Not that she really wished to be reflected, but she hated to leave Seaciff, turn up as it was, and all the dear, familiar things she had always known. Nevertheless, Geoffrey was impatient, and she felt further delay would be most unfair to him.

The nights and mornings now were nippy and only in the middle of the day could she dive into the surf or the swimming pool. This particular day, coming out from a rigorous ten lengths in the pool, she an evening and rest, and then we are lonely enough if we have not somebody of our very own to bear with us.

It is when we are old that we most need our own homes in which we can do as we please; our own food that we can have cooked the way we like it; our own chairs, and the privilege of indulging ourselves in all of our little cranky ways. Most of all, we need an old husband or wife who will think our reminiscences are interesting instead of bothersome and to whom we can say, "Don't you remember?"

But, while I strongly recommend marriage for the bachelor of 59, I would impress upon him the necessity of caution in picking out a wife. He should marry a woman in his own class, because he would have nothing in common with a girl whose every idea of life would be antagonistic to him, and who would run him into the grave dragging him around to parties and night clubs.

He should make sure that he is getting a good cook, because one of the things he is marrying for is to get bread like Mother used to make. And, above all, he should be sure that his wife is not only intelligent but also belongs to the same school of thought in religion and politics as he does. For when he is taking on a fireside companion he wants an entertaining one and not a bore.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have a boy of 14 who wants to go out with other boys and girls of his own age about twice a week. Am I doing the right thing by keeping him in?

H.B.

Answer: No, you are being very unfair to him, and the first thing you know he will run away from home to get a little liberty. Learning how to play with other nice youngsters is an important part of a boy's education.

See Tally approaching her, a frown on his face.

Without preface he said: "I promised you long ago to give you first chance at buying that rosewood cabinet I had to sell. Well, it has to be sold."

"Why?" she asked, putting the rubber cap from her head and shaking out her hair. "Isn't your farm making money?"

"Yes, I did have a small savings account but it went for the doctor's bill. Now the semi-annual taxes are due on this place and I must pay them. Your brother paid the first half last spring; now it's my turn and the only way I can raise enough money is on that cabinet. This antique dealer offered me five hundred."

Jocelyn picked up a thick Turkish towel and began wiping the water from her face and arms. Her legs felt cold. Why did Tally always approach her and speak to her as if he had a chip on his shoulder and hoped and expected she would knock it off?

"I'll ask Thorn for the money as soon as he comes home," she promised. "He hasn't given me my allowance yet this month, and I need it. I—I have a lot of clothes to buy for my marriage."

Tally stiffened. "At least you'll never have to work for a living. It might have done you some good; still, you might have found out you couldn't take it."

"Do you have to be insulting?" "I don't mean it that way. Sorry. I'll call for the money tonight."

"Don't bother," she called after his retreating back. "I'll bring it over when I come to see your grandfather."

She went slowly into the house and up to her room. She was so lonely these days. She missed Bob terribly. She had come to dread the ritual of dinner because she had to face Thorn's casual and long empty expanse of table. Thorn had changed so since Nola's departure. He had certainly become a person of paradoxical moods. He was, by turn, morose or genial; silent or over-talkative. When she had inquired as to his sudden interest in Gramp he had put her off with an evasive answer.

"Wild-Cat Scheme"

Life, which up until the Mack's advent, had flowed serenely and peacefully, had now become complicated and unpredictable. Even her own mind and emotions were tangled up in disturbing complexities.

Hearing Thorn go into his room, she drew on a robe and knocked on his door. Her appearance seemed to startle him. He looked as if his clothes were full of pins sticking into him.

"Thorn, what on earth is the matter with you?" she demanded. "You're as jittery and jumpy as a racehorse."

"Oh, it's nothing. Nerves, I guess. I'll take a run in to the doctor's tomorrow and have him take a look at me."

She told him about the taxes and the rosewood cabinet, finishing: "So be a darling and write me a check for five hundred, will you? And while you're at it give me my allowance. You might spare a hundred or so extra for clothes because I'll be driving to San Francisco in the next day or so."

Thorn slumped into a chair as if his legs had suddenly refused to support him. He moistened his dry lips with the top of his tongue.

"Wild-Cat Scheme"

Life, which up until the Mack's advent, had flowed serenely and peacefully, had now become complicated and unpredictable. Even her own mind and emotions were tangled up in disturbing complexities.

Hearing Thorn go into his room, she drew on a robe and knocked on his door. Her appearance seemed to startle him. He looked as if his clothes were full of pins sticking into him.

"Thorn, what on earth is the matter with you?" she demanded. "You're as jittery and jumpy as a racehorse."

"Oh, it's nothing. Nerves, I guess. I'll take a run in to the doctor's tomorrow and have him take a look at me."

SATURDAY TALK

A letter and a poem which came with it have taken my mind back to the time, almost a century ago, when Samuel F. B. Morse made his electric telegraph a success.

"I enjoy your column, and seldom miss it," writes Lennox S. Drew. "Since your topics cover such a large range, I thought you might like to have the enclosed poem. It was written by my grandmother, Eliza Heining (Mrs. J. F. Schermerhorn).

"She and Professor Morse were great friends, each admiring the talent of the other, and it was natural that he should ask her to write something about his invention. She also wrote 'Lines on Old Blandford Church.'

"The first words sent (in 1844) over the Washington-Baltimore telegraph, 'What hath God wrought,' were dictated by Anna G. Ellsworth. They were followed at once by this poem, which Morse asked Mrs. Schermerhorn to prepare. The poem was entitled 'The Magic Telegraph,' and fitted the occasion."

Here are a few verses from "The Magic Telegraph."

"Oh carrier dove spread not thy wing,
Thou beauteous messenger of air,
To waiting eyes and hearts to bring
The tidings thou wast wont to bear.

"Urge not the flying courier's speed,
Give not his neck the loosened rein,
Nor bid his panting sides to bleed,
As swift he thunders o'er the plain.

"Touch but the magic wire and lo!
Thy thought is borne on flaming track;
And swifter far than winds can blow
Is sped the rapid answer back."

It was kind of Mrs. Drew to send us this poem, and I wish to thank her in the name of all readers. I like the line about the answer coming back "swifter than the winds can blow." The fastest-moving tornado in history does not travel nearly so fast as the "clicks" through a telegraph wire.

LAUGHS AT DUCKING

Quinault, Wash.—P—Lizzie Ralston is 68 but she doesn't let her age interfere with her fishing.

Mrs. Ralston recently hooked a husky trout, and standing up in her boat to play the fish toppled backward, the clamorous back into the boat and landed her catch.

"Land sakes, it wasn't anything to make a fuss over," she said when friends worried about the incident. "I may be old and I may be a woman, but I wasn't going to let that fish get away."

Heinie and Grenadiers to Make Double Appearance at Waverly

Probably one of the most unique musical combinations in show business is Heinie and His Grenadiers, the popular radio aggregation, who will make a personal appearance here tomorrow, June 25, afternoon and evening, at the Waverly Beach Ballroom.

Not only has this well-known band received the top of the musical units but thanks to Heinie's gift for developing talent, it offers a wealth of variety stunts as well. Most unusual is the fact that no outsiders or special performers travel with the group. Every novel

Ward Off Perils Of Summer, Warns Insurance Firm

Employers Mutuals Outlines Hazards of Pleasant Season

Safety engineers of the Employers Mutual Liability Insurance company tell us in a recent bulletin, that Accident never takes a holiday. One set of hazards is merely replaced by another as the seasons change, say the engineers.

"Spring has melted into summer, and everybody knows what summer hazards are. But we shall remind you of them anyway. Some unpleasant things, if remembered in this delightful season of baseball, fishing, golf, and gardening, will allow the season to pass less painfully.

"So don't forget: "Heat prostration, heatstroke, and sunstroke. Avoid them by doing what the doctors have said again and again—summer hygiene, summer diet, plenty of salt when exerting yourself on hot days.

"Water accidents. Remember the precautions to be taken even though you can swim. Don't swim directly after a heavy meal or allow your swimming appetite to get beyond your actual prowess. And your conduct in boats—know what you are about and something about the waters you sail on. In a boat, allow the most skillful sailor to be in complete charge.

"Fourth of July. Attend public fireworks exhibits. Let somebody else provide the show. Scores of children die each year as the result of handling fireworks, and thousands suffer painful burns.

"Sunburn. A beautiful tan is fine, and the sun's rays are beneficial, but thousands of impetuous tan seekers suffer severe burns each year. Many of these impetuous ones who expose themselves too long the first day are obliged to spend days in bed where each time they move they are painfully reminded of their folly.

"Automobiles. That Saturday afternoon hurry to get to the fishing spot, on the swimming beach, and the Sunday night drive back may be dangerous. Crowded highways, passing on hills and curves, too much hurry for the little time saved—these are common, but deadly hazards.

"Automobile accidents were reduced last year, from 39,500 in 1937 to 32,000 in 1938. Why not reduce the innumerable accidents from other causes?

PARENTS TAKE RAP
Jackson, Tenn. (AP)—Parents of small boys who shoot out street lights with slingshots must reckon with the police department henceforth.

Police Chief Tip Taylor said he was prepared to prosecute mammas and papas for their children's delinquencies.

Parents may reckon with the kids after settling with the city.

just 30 years old, slim and handsome.

The three-star performers of Heinie's troupe are Willie, Walter, and Droopy, the lovable comics who have helped to make the band what it is today. Beginning with no experience whatsoever in the entertainment field, they have developed, under Heinie's supervision, into a trio that has become famous throughout the Middle West. They will, of course, be on hand when the Grenadiers appear at Waverly and their antics, the sweet music of the band, and the other novelty acts should be something that no youngster or older would care to miss.

Perhaps the lowest prices ever to be in effect in this vicinity for this popular band will prevail. Only 15 cents per person will be the admission for the Sunday afternoon appearance in combination with Waverly's usual free public picnic every Sunday. Youngsters accompanied by their parents will be admitted free during this period. Evening admission prices announced by the Waverly management will be ladies 25 cents and gentlemen 35 cents throughout the entire dance period.

In addition to the many outstanding attractions at Waverly including the Penny Arcade, shooting gallery, troupe of 18 Rhythmic monkeys, and excellent picnic accommodations, Mae West, famous midwest cow recently acquired by the Waverly management, will again be exhibited free over the week-end. Imported direct from the world-renowned midwest cow ranch at Stillwater, Oklahoma, the Midwest cow is one of the few in existence in the entire world. Recently featured on a Bob Ripley radio network program, it is, perhaps, the outstanding free attraction now present at Waverly. The Midwest cow stands only 34 inches high, is full-crown in every other respect and produces more milk than the average cow. Already hundreds of people from all parts of the state have made special trips to Waverly to view this unusual animal.

SEARS AUTO STATION PROVIDES FREE SERVICE

Above is the Sears-Roebuck service station, just behind the firm's Appleton headquarters on Soldiers Square. What with Sears' special before-the-Fourth sale of tires, seat covers, oil and batteries, the station has been humming with activity. The service station is maintained to provide free installation of tires, batteries, seat covers and the like, which are purchased at Sears. The fact that prices have been sharply reduced during the sale does not affect Sears' policy of free service.

The station is operated by experienced men and is completely equipped to handle all jobs including battery testing and charging. It is always open during Sears' store hours. Because of two hour parking facilities on the square, it is possible for Sears' customers to leave their cars nearby, shop leisurely, and then have tires put on, batteries installed and oil changed.

LA VILLA FEATURES AIR-CONDITIONED COMFORT

A view of the long, spacious, comfortable booth room at the La Villa Restaurant, 130 E. College avenue. Is shown here. This part of the La Villa, like the entire restaurant, offers real comfort even during the warmest summer days because of the modern, fully-equipped air-conditioning system operating year-round at this popular eating establishment. Summer and winter comfortable, healthful temperatures with proper humidity content are maintained, the La Villa management insists, adding considerably to its already pleasant dining atmosphere. La Villa Restaurant patrons agree that it is the ideal place to stop for lunches, dinners, sandwiches, and snacks and, of course, a cold glass of beer during the regular dining hours or during up-town shopping trips or after shows. The service is first-class, courteous, and friendly with reasonable prices prevailing. Its candy department, incidentally, offers a choice of many assortments of the finest candies done up, if desired, in special boxes fitting special occasions. Stop in at the La Villa soon, the management suggests, and delight in the luxurious, cool summer weather comfort. Dining, of course, will be that much more pleasant, offering a complete relaxation from daily work.

Good Mattress Is Vital to Healthy Rest; Costs Little

Twin City Mattress Co. Makes New Ones and Rebuilds Old

In order to feel relaxed, peppy, and remain in good health, completely refreshed after eight hours sleep, the correct sleeping equipment—mattress, springs, pillows, and beddings is essential, maintains the Twin City Mattress Company, 129 Canal street, Neenah.

The most important article of this equipment is the mattress. This firm contends, for it has been discovered that people sleep most restfully with the spine straight rather than allowing the body to sag into the center of the mattress. The Twin City Mattress Company, builders of new mattresses and rebuilders of old mattresses, offers the benefit of its eight years experience in this type of work, assuring dependable, high quality work with a guarantee accompanying every piece.

New innerspring mattresses are built by this Twin City firm at the low price of $12.00 and up with new cotton mattresses being turned out at $6.00 and up. Finest materials available are used, this firm maintains, with 182 coil units built into every innerspring mattress, providing floating qualities for every muscle of the body, consequently giving complete relaxation to the user.

Special low prices are also offered for the rebuilding of old mattresses. The charge is quoted for regular mattress rebuilding as only $3.95 and the cost of making a mattress into the most modern type of innerspring is only $8.95.

The Twin City Mattress Company has established an enviable reputation for quality work at exceedingly low cost over a period of many years. It uses modern, renovating, and filling equipment, an important factor in making over mattresses and assuring that they are filled evenly throughout.

It's wise to check over mattresses and determine which are incapable of providing adequate and comfortable sleep. A telephone call to Neenah, 44, will bring complete information regarding any of the many services of the firm. A free call and delivery service is maintained.

Buyers to Save 75% In Sherwin-Williams Sale of Wall Paper

Slashing prices so that savings of 75 percent of cost are possible, the Sherwin-Williams company, 302 E. College avenue, this week announced a close-out clearance of over 250 different patterns of wall paper.

All patterns are in perfect condition, it was pointed out, and some of them are being closed out for as little as 2 cents a roll. Initial response to the Sherwin-Williams offer indicates that the wall paper close-outs will last for but a short time, as buyers hastened to take advantage of prices that obviously will not be repeated.
